Morning Consult is tracking what voters across the country think about how President Donald Trump and Republicans in Congress are governing the United States ahead of the 2026 midterm elections. Each week, we'll update this page with fresh and timely data on all of the major questions facing Washington, including views about the people in charge, the issues dominating the conversation and what is actually breaking through to the electorate.

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Trump posts best net approval rating since May: Half of voters disapprove of Trump's job performance (down from 53% last week), while 47% approve (up from 45%) following a cease-fire agreement between Israel and Iran that came after the U.S. military's bombing of several nuclear sites in the Islamic Republic. That net approval rating of minus 3 points is Trump's best since late May, and comes as the president generated his most positive news coverage in over a month.
- Backing for the president's national security handling increases: Trump's net approval rating on national security issues ticked up since last week, with 53% now approving and 40% disapproving of his handling. That 13-point spread is up from an 8-point margin in last week's survey, which was conducted during the U.S. military's strikes in Iran.

- Trump's deportation enforcement is being noticed: Most voters (62%) say the deportation of undocumented migrants is a “top priority,” the highest share we’ve recorded since late February. We observed similar movement regarding perceptions of the White House’s focus on stopping illegal immigration at the U.S.-Mexico border. Voters remain divided over whether Trump should be prioritizing these issues, though they continue to favor his and congressional Republicans’ handling of immigration relative to other policy areas.
- One Big Beautiful Bill Act starts breaking through: As Trump presses Congress to advance his signature legislative priority, the share of voters who said they had seen, read or heard “a lot” about Congress’ push reached 38%, a high point in our ongoing tracking. However, the American strikes on Iranian nuclear sites may have distracted voters’ attention: 52% said they’d consumed a lot of information about the strikes, which led to a surge in positive buzz about foreign affairs more broadly.
