Trump's approval ratings on immigration hit a 2025 low

By Eli Yokley & Cameron Easley

Morning Consult is tracking what voters across the country think about how President Donald Trump and Republicans in Congress are governing the United States ahead of the 2026 midterm elections. Each week, we'll update this page with fresh and timely data on all of the major questions facing Washington, including views about the people in charge, the issues dominating the conversation and what is actually breaking through to the electorate. ## KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Trump's overall approval rating ticks up: The president's approval rating sits at 46%, up 1 percentage point from a week ago, while 52% of voters continue to disapprove of his job performance. Both figures are a bit worse than his average approval ratings since he took office in January (47% approval, 51% disapproval).
- Support for his approach on immigration drops: Voters are only 2 points more likely to approve (47%) than disapprove (45%) of Trump's handling of immigration, a new low since he returned to office in January. Despite that low, immigration remains the best issue for congressional Republicans, who maintain a 9-point trust edge over their Democratic counterparts.
