

InsiderAdvantage Georgia Survey: GOP F Governor Remains a Two Man Contest; S Contest Could Become Close Between A Major Candidates

Posted on April 24, 2026

NOTE: InsiderAdvantage has polled Georgia statewide elections more than any other polling organization in history. Since 2002 the firm has provided polling for three different Atlanta network affiliates around the state. RealClearPolitics ranks the firm among the most accurate multi-state pollsters. This begins our series of polls of the 2026 contests.

800 likely GOP primary voters; Survey dates: April 22-23; MOE: 3.46%; Weighted for age, race, and mode text/panel

Undecided: 8%

InsiderAdvantage Pollster Matt Towery:

"In the race for governor Rick Jackson enjoys a lead, particularly among female and senior voters in a solid second place, enjoying support from younger voters. Brad Raffensperger and Chris Carr are splitting the male and female metro voters who might be less inclined to support President Trump. I am undecided in the race, but from my years of experience a good deal of that number, this far out of the voters who say they are voting, but don't end up participating.

The Senate race is more competitive. The distance between Mike Collins and Buddy Carter is within the margin of error. And Derek Dooley has gained ground. There is room for Dooley to come up more given his support in Governor Kemp. Kemp's appeal has been in metro areas where female and senior voters like him are. Undecideds are in those demographics. This race could end up a three man toss-up by the time election day.

President Trump has amazingly strong approval among likely GOP voters at 86%. This explains why every candidate has his name in it."
