

InsiderAdvantage Georgia Gubernatorial Survey: Potential Democrat Primary Blowout, Lance Bottoms Over Fifty Percent; GOP Race Shows Jackson and Jones Nearly Even

Posted on May 1, 2026

With early voting underway an InsiderAdvantage survey shows Keisha Lance Bottoms positioned to potentially win the Democratic nomination for Governor of Georgia without a runoff. In the Republican contest Rick Jackson's lead over Burt Jones has narrowed.

The survey was conducted April 28-29; 800 Likely voters; MOE 3.46%; Weighted for age, race, gender; Mixed mode text/panel.

Democrat Results:

Lance Bottoms: 52%

Thurmond: 16%

Duncan: 9%

Esteves: 5%

Other: 4%

No Opinion/ Undecided: 14%

Republican Results:

Jackson: 28%

Jones: 24%

Raffensperger: 18%

Carr: 11%

Other: 7%

No Opinion/Undecided: 12%

Analysis by InsiderAdvantage Pollster Matt Towery:

The Democratic primary is relatively simple. In a primary in which female African American voters dominate, Lance Bottoms has a majority of both African American and female voters. Add to that a healthy portion of white voters and a majority of men and you have a recipe for a likely win with no runoff. She enjoys name identification that the other candidates lack.

The Republican contest is more complex. Jackson and Jones are near a statistical tie given the margin of error for the survey. They both look to be headed towards a runoff. Both Raffensperger and Carr have gained ground. But Carr's rise splits the more moderate/less Trump supportive GOP vote with Raffensperger. Were one of the two candidates not on the ballot, the remaining one would have a chance of making it to a runoff. But at present it looks like Jackson and Jones are the likely runoff candidates.
